Seventy Years of Progress

Seventy years ago on March 3, 1891, the North Carolina General Assembly passed a bill introduced by Hugh Cale, a Negro legislator from Pasquotank County, empowering the State Board of Education to "establish a state normal and training school for the colored race in the town of Elizabeth City."

On January 4, 1892, State Normal School began operation in a rented frame building on the campus of the Baptist Normal Institute located on Roanoke Avenue with two teachers, Professor P. W. Moore and his assistant, Professor John H. M. Butler; 69 students, and a budget of $900 for maintenance.

OLD ADMINISTRATION BUILDING

BOYS' INDUSTRIAL BUILDING

After operating one year in this location, the school moved to Shannon Street, now Euclid Avenue, in a larger structure which became known as the "Old Normal Building." As the enrollment increased, homes in the vicinity of the school were used for the primary grades and also to house out-of-town students.

As the school continued to grow, efforts were begun to raise funds to purchase a school site. A friend donated five acres of land on Southern Avenue Extended and eighteen acres were purchased at a cost of $2000. On this site two brick buildings were erected with state funds. One of these buildings which is now Lane Hall was used as the administration building. The other, Symera Hall, was used as a girls' dormitory, dining hall, and kitchen.

EAST VIEW of CAMPUS.

1921 proved a banner year for the Institution. The North Carolina General Assembly appropriated one half million dollars for the erection of buildings at the three Negro teacher-training institutions in the state. Although this appropriation was greater than previous appropriations, it was not adequate to erect and equip the needed buildings at the three institutions. Dr. N. C. Newbold, Director of the Division of Negro Education in North Carolina, secured from the General Education Board of New York $125,000 which was added to the appropriation made by the General Assembly. From these funds Moore Hall, Butler Hall, an Industrial Arts Building and two faculty homes were erected and equipped.

Dr. Moore retired in 1927 and was made President Emeritus, the first such action to be taken in a public institution in the State of North Carolina.

BOYS'
DORMITORY

State Normal School became Elizabeth City State Teachers College by an act of the General Assembly on March 28, 1939. During this same year the State Department of Public Education accredited the college as an "A" rated institution which entitled the graduates of the four-year course to class "A" certificates. Dr. Bias remained in office until July 15, 1939.

Dr. John H. Bias succeeded Dr. Moore as President. During his administration a library was erected and additions were made to the administration building and Butler Hall. The college program was changed to a four-year teacher-training program.

1925 NORMAL LIGHT STAFF

"It is indeed fitting and proper that we should show our appreciation for this institution for which the leaders have so nobly striven, an institution that has led aright the footsteps of so many, that has helped them to climb from obscurity up the ladder of fame and honor. We hope that this torch once lighted will grow brighter and brighter as the fleeting years go by. May we who tread where it sheds its radiant beams, hold up this ideal of the Normal Light."

— Edward Everett Hale

From November, 1939, to December, 1945, Elizabeth City State Teachers College moved forward despite the depression and World War II under the able leadership of Dr. Harold L. Trigg. Under his administration the faculty was strengthened and the offerings of the college were broadened. Plans were made for improvement of facilities and future expansion. Dr. Trigg resigned in 1945.

Dr. Harold L. Trigg

Dr. Sidney D. Williams

Dr. S. D. Williams, the college Dean, was elected in 1945 by the Board of Trustees as the fourth president of Elizabeth City State Teachers College. The college experienced phenomenal growth during Dr. Williams' administration. Appropriations from the General Assemblies of 1947, 1949 and 1951 provided funds for the erection of a girls' dormitory, a physical education building, an infirmary, a stadium, several faculty homes and a science building. Other buildings were remodeled, paved roads and walks were built and the grounds were landscaped.

The faculty increased as did the course offerings. The Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools recognized the college as an "A" rated institution. A program of evaluation under the supervision of the American Association of Colleges for Teacher Education was also begun. Dr. Williams retired August 31, 1958.

ELIZABETH CITY STATE TEACHERS COLLEGE

ELIZABETH CITY, NORTH CAROLINA

OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT

May 1961

To The Class of 1961:

Seventy years ago the North Carolina legislature established State Normal School at Elizabeth City. Today that institution has become Elizabeth City State Teachers College with a physical plant now valued at almost three million dollars, a staff which this year, for the first time, exceeded 100, and students registering who this year, for the first time, exceeded 700. You leave this institution on the crest of a most significant wave in its history.

The college's history of progress is significant and inspiring. The vision and diligent work of all who have made the history here through the years are beacons flashing on your paths to light your way. Each flash is a challenge to greater achievement.

I greet the members of the Class of 1961 and, at the same time, admonish you that you leave at a significant time in the history of this college — a time when much will be expected of you. I believe sincerely that you will meet this challenge through your contribution to the State of North Carolina, to the nation, and to the world.

Mrs. Ridley, my family and I congratulate the Class of 1961. We shall anticipate hearing of your lives and living during the years to come. May your actions and attitudes continue to contribute to the progress of our college and of mankind.

Very sincerely yours,
